

Virtual Prenatal Genetics Short Course 2022

19 September – 8 November*

Online course

This skills based course is designed to give midwives and other health professionals working in a prenatal testing setting, the tools to help them to enable patients to access appropriate onwards referral. These include obtaining a family history, identify high risk family histories, approaches to genetic testing, consent taking and counselling skills associated with providing information and results.

Participants will be equipped with the basics of prenatal genetic counselling and managing complex scenarios as well as an update on new technologies. They will also gain skills in taking a family history and assessing when a referral on to clinical genetics is indicated.

*The course will take place on six half day sessions running between September and November 2022

For more information and to book visit:

guysandstthomasevents.co.uk/courses/prenatal-genetics-2022